Farquhar, to which frigate he continued attached, principally on the North Sea station, until April, 1814. During that period he served in the boats under Lieut. Sam. Radford at the cutting out of two French vessels, carrying together 16 guns and 59 men, and destruction of a third, a lugger of 6 guns and 26 men, lying in the Vlie, 29 May, 1810, and was lent, in 1813, to No. 7 gunboat, one of a light squadron employed under Capt. Farquhar in blockading the North Elbe, where he took part in the reduction of Cuxhaven, in the attack also on the Danish flotilla at Busum, on which occasion two of the enemy's gun-vessels were sunk, and, as a Volunteer, in the erection of batteries at the siege of Gluckstadt, where he was so severely frost-bitten as nearly to lose a leg. Mr. Bromcker, who passed his examination in 1818, subsequently served for 11 years, as mate, on the Mediterranean and East India stations. He was seriously injured in the face in the early part of 1829, while in charge of a tender to the Prince Regent 120, flag-ship at the Nore of Sir Hen. 27 Two clasps—Sappho, 2nd March, 1808, Algiers (D. McN. Beatty, Midshipman), fine and extra rare 1 — 13 15 .

Daniel McNeal Beatty entered the Navy, 24 March, 1807, as Fst. Cl. Vol., on board the Sappho of 18 guns and 120 men, Capt. Geo. Langford; in which sloop he escorted, as Midshipman, the Hon. Mr. Pierrepont as Ambassador to the King of Sweden, Gustavus Adolphus, then besieged by the French army in Stralsund—accompanied, in Aug. of the same year, the expedition to Copenhagen—and, on 2 March, 1808, assisted at the capture off Flamborough Head, after a close action of half-an-hour, of the Admiral Yawl Danish brig of 28 guns and 83 men—a service for which Capt. Langford was advanced to Post-rank. Mr. Beatty next served for two years on board the Zenobia 18, Capt. Alex. Rich. Mackenzie, during which period, in Aug. 1809, he was actively employed with the light squadron under Sir Edw. Owen, in co-operation with the troops at the bombardment of Flushing. He then joined the Alexandria 32, Capts. John Quilliam and Robt. Cathcart, on the Baltic station, where he was twice engaged with the Danish gun-boats, took part in several cutting-out affairs, and while affording protection to convoys, came into frequent collision with the enemy's row-galleys; and on removing in Feb. 1813 to the Dannemark 74, Capt. Henry Edw. Reginald Baker, was employed, until the conclusion of the war, in blockading the Texel and Cherbourg squadrons, and at the Cape of Good Hope. For a few months in 1815, Mr. Beatty served as Master's Mate in the Royal Sovereign 100 and Tonnant 80, Capt. Edw. Pelham Brenton, lying at Plymouth. He afterwards became attached, in July, 1816, to the Severn 40, Capt. Hon. Fred. Wm. Edward Jennings was one of those engaged at the second relief of Lucknow, under Sir Colin Campbell, in November, 1857. During the struggle day and night, from the capture of the Secundra Bagh on the 16th until the actual accomplishment of the heroic enterprise on the 22nd, Jennings' bravery in working the guns was noticed by all, and especially by the Commander-in-Chief himself, who, although wounded, had scarcely quitted the saddle the whole time. With him are associated Lieutenant H. E. Harrington, Gunners J. Park, T. Laughnan, and H. McInnes, all of whom, under Clause 13 of the Royal Warrant, were elected by their comrades, and in due course (Christmas Eve, 1858), were gazetted. Jennings survived his comrades by many years, working to the last as a Corporation street labourer at Shields.

Very rare 7

McWheeney's Cross has three dates, and he was decorated by Queen Victoria in Hyde Park on the 26th of June, 1857.

Decorated for his conduct on October 20th, 1854, when he saved the life of Private John Keane, who had been dangerously wounded when the Sharpshooters were forced to retreat from the "quarries." He took Keane on his back and carried him for a long distance under heavy rifle-fire until he could place him in safety. On December 5, 1854, Corporal Courtney, a Sharpshooter, was severely wounded in the head. McWheeney went out into the open and, under a terrific storm of lead, brought him some distance back. He then, with his bayonet, dug up the ground to form a slight cover for him, as they were by no means out of range and the fire was still very severe, and remained with him until darkness had set in, when he was able to retire with him into safety. On June 18, 1855, he volunteered for the advance-guard of General Eyre's Brigade in the Cemetery. The "Gazette" states that he was "always vigilant and active," and that he was "never absent from duty during the war."

The gallant conduct of Hughes was specially noticed by Colonel Campbell, 90th Light Infantry, on June 7, 1855, at the storming of "the Quarries." He twice went for ammunition across the open ground, also going to the front and bringing in Pte. John Hampton, who was lying wounded. On June 18, 1855, he volunteered to bring in Lieut. Hobson of his regiment, who had been shot, and in performing this humane act was himself severely wounded.
